The collection

Egon von Vietinghoff's oeuvre resides in innumerable apartments and private houses. In addition, some are in possession of a public collection and small private museums. The unsold paintings are still part of his estate, and some are for sale. In order to provide a representative choice for future exhibitions, the Egon von Vietinghoff Foundation was established in 1989 in Zurich, Switzerland. It is a non-profit organization which actually manages the present collection of 82 works including some examples of his graphic work never offered for sale. In the beginning, it possessed 64 works dated from 1932 to 1988, selected by the artist himself; later it was enriched with three early paintings from 1928, 1931 and 1936 due to heritage and donation. Thus, the beginning stages of seventy years of creation are more completely documented.

The Foundation aims at preserving the memory of the painter and at spreading his spiritual legacy: the concepts of "Transcendental Painting" and the method "School of Pure Vision". In addition, it attests to the continuity of the buried knowledge of the specific European traditional oil-resin painting whose multilayer technique is a unique cultural heritage, and encourages its transmission.

Capital, income and expenditure

The Foundation's capital stems from the private fortune of the artist. The proceeds of the capital cover only the most necessary costs such as the rental of the location which is storage rather than show room, auditor, webhosting and internet fees. Years ago, it was possible to publish some postcard art prints and to establish a picture library of selected paintings on CD. However, the creation of the comprehensive website and its translation into French and English, the comfortable and sophisticated internal database and the activities for the centenary in 2003 were not fully covered by the proceeds. In 1995, a legacy enabled the Foundation to produce a slide show, a video and a small brochure as the first acknowledgment of the artist. In addition, the selling of an inherited painting helped to cover a part of the expenses. The lithography of a female nude pencil drawing, produced in a special process by sunlight exposure, was paid out of the painter's own pocket. The proceeds of this numerated and signed edition as well as the art cards, the brochure and the video go to the Foundation. The copyright of the handbook is in the Foundation's possession; the handbook was published on the website of the Foundation, some years ago (in German only).

Objective

According to the bylaws of the Foundation, the main objective is to make the vast life work of Egon von Vietinghoff accessible to a large public. For this purpose and the following aims, the Foundation work includes several areas:

- Permanent integration of some paintings of the Foundation's collection or of his estate in appropriate museums or other locations of an adequate level of the quality of the artist's works.
- Greater attention and revival of the traditional multilayer oil-resin painting which is a unique and specific European cultural heritage.
- Spreading Egon von Vietinghoff's ideas: the method "The School of Pure Vision" and his philosophy "The Transcendental Painting", which is a phenomenon independent of his own creation.
- Translations of his handbook and his spiritual legacy, the brochure and the website into other languages.
- Support professional articles and dissertations on the work of Egon von Vietinghoff in colleges, academies and universities.
- Documentation of Egon von Vietinghoff's name as well as the terms "Transcendental painting" and "School of Pure Vision" in different encyclopedias
- Attention to Egon von Vietinghoff as a person and artist through articles in media such as magazines, books, TV, and virtual galleries, as well as his oeuvre, technique, conception of art philosophy and the aims of the Foundation.

The board members and addresses

The board currently consists of five voluntary members: Liane and Alexander von Vietinghoff, Mrs Beatrice Kohler and M Robert W. Buff, PhD. An independent auditor is in charge of the annual financial statement, while the finance department of the city of Zurich is responsible for the state supervision.

Contact addresses of the board members are listed on the website.

Your suggestion, feedback, criticism and contributions are welcome at any time.
